

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: Sullivan, Jacob J <SullivanJJ@state.gov>
Sent: Wednesday, February 3, 2010 8:22 PM
To: H
Subject: Re: H: Game back on track NI. Sid

I confess that I will never understand how Shaun decides when to call me, Declan, Lou Susman, or Sid with breaking news. So many channels!

We've been hearing all day that Peter would take a back-me-or-sack-me public vote of his party. Hopefully tomorrow will be the day -- and hopefully he'll be successful.

In an interesting show of strength, he has announced he'll resume as First Minister.

----- Original Message -----

From: H <HDR22@clintonemail.com>
To: Sullivan, Jacob J
Sent: Wed Feb 03 20:12:16 2010
Subject: Fw: H: Game back on track NI. Sid

Fyi

----- Original Message -----

From: sbwhoeop [redacted]
To: H
Sent: Wed Feb 03 19:58:30 2010
Subject: H: Game back on track NI. Sid

B6

CONFIDENTIAL

February 3, 2010

For: Hillary
From: Sid
Re: Game back on, NI

Shaun just called, 7:50 pm EST, to relate the latest sequence and to tell you that after near breakdown of negotiations on Monday they are back on track (maybe). Robinson went into his assembly on Monday thinking he could pull off the deal, but was shocked to discover the degree of opposition, centering partly on Reg Empey (UUP). (Cameron has tried to forge an alliance of UUP, elements of DUP and the Tories, on the agenda at the secret country house meeting last week.) But tonight, Wednesday, Shaun has got Robinson and McGuinness to agree to all points, pushing past the previous sticking point on the Minister of Justice and relation to the Executive. The matter now rests with Robinson and his ability to sell it tomorrow. He has told Shaun and Gordon he believes he can do it. He needs 75 percent of his party. So, the perils of peace continue.