Subject: Commission on the Status of Women

Cheryl,

As you know, we are working with Melanne on the upcoming Commission on the Status of Women/February 2011. The US has been asked to nominate experts to participate in interactive panels during the meeting. Specifically, experts should focus on the link between women's education and employment, women's participation in science and technology education and employment, women's access to and use of technology, or gender biases in scientific knowledge production and product design. We understand that US nominees are often not selected for these panels given needs to balance regional representations. Still, we should submit one or two names for consideration. Our suggested nominations would be [redacted] who could speak to any of the topical areas listed; Dr. [redacted] another possibility is [redacted] who just left DOE. Just wondering if S would have anyone else in particular she would like to put forward.

Thanks.
