Subject: Embracing the PPD

In your book tonight, as Tab 4 of the materials for the USGLC event, is a list I put together of all the key things you said in your CGD speech and the parallel language in the PPD. It is really worth skimming; it shows at a glance how you set the agenda and won the day. As the Secretary who came in determined to elevate development, you have a great deal to take credit for in launching the first national development policy. And as my PPD staff briefings with Gayle on the Hill today demonstrated, the PPD sets the table beautifully for the QDDR.
