

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Friday, January 25, 2013 9:17 PM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: (no subject)

Pls respond to young woman w cc to Melanne.

From: PVerveer [redacted]
Sent: Thursday, January 17, 2013 10:59 PM Eastern Standard Time
To: H
Subject: (no subject)

B6

Thank you for hosting Yousef and the GU group today.

I'm very happy that they are willing to institutionalize two of your significant achievements. I think the institute can become both a global research center of excellence (since we need the data and oral histories), as well as a public forum on issues affecting much of the world and involving women, peace and security. They also have a campus in Doha and a far-flung global network of institutional connections we will be able to tap. [redacted]

Jack is prepared to meet with you at your convenience after you leave State.

What follows is a note of thanks from the young woman who has been working on the project in preparation for its formal launch for being able to meet you.

From: [redacted]

Thank you for letting me come today, it meant a lot to me. I'm a nobody compared to the others but I have so much respect and admiration for her. Her speech at G'town changed my life and to even have the chance to meet her was incredible.

One more thing,
 You will be getting papers to sunset the Women Business Leaders Council (which actually expires and would have to be renewed). Attached to it are thank you letters to the Council members. Once this formality is completed, I will be in touch with the members regarding next steps.

Thanks again for everything.

--
Mayesha Alam
 Special Assistant to the Dean of the School and Coordinator, Institute for Women, Peace & Security
 Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service
 Georgetown University

E: [redacted]

P: 202-687-2181/

W: iwpsd.georgetown.edu