Glad to be back. Can we talk this am? I'm awake for better and more likely worse until jet lag hits later.

The Business Meeting is scheduled for 2:15 pm, although the Committee Counsels have informed me they'd appreciate an answer before 11:00 am so that they can properly advise Members before their midday caucus meetings (they go directly to the Business Meeting after the caucus gatherings).

I tried to make the case to Lugar's staff. They explained that they did not know which way Lugar would ultimately vote.

Frankly, whereas last year I think we could have banked on Lugar showing some political courage here, his current politics dictate that he will probably fall in line with the others if he sees the vote count heading overwhelmingly against.

Thanks Miguel. Jonathan came to see me after he saw you, [redacted]

I realize that in the end, it wouldn't make much difference, but is there no way we could encourage folks like Lugar not to join this bandwagon by conveying our belief that he is an excellent nominee?

Subject: Farrar -- Update

Joe Macmanus and I spoke to Jonathan Farrar, [redacted] with the news that Senator Menendez is intent on blocking his nomination.

We discussed options, and he explained that he would get back to us tomorrow morning with a decision [redacted]

I also alerted the SFRC Majority and Minority Counsels of the situation in order that they have awareness of the situation. A short while ago I received a follow up call from Senator Lugar's Chief Counsel. He explained to me that he has learned that Senator Rubio has been talking to other Republican members of the Committee to encourage them to join him in opposing Farrar's nomination. We obviously don't know what will come of Rubio's efforts, but because it may influence Farrar's decision on how to proceed, we let him know that there could be additional "no" votes in addition to Menendez and Rubio.
