Subject: RE: Egyptian Rep in Ramallah on GOE Contacts with Hamas and GOI

B6

Following the President's calls with PM Netanyahu and President Morsi last night, I spoke with DM Barak (late last night) and NSA Amidror (this morning). [redacted]

B5

[redacted] that Secretary Clinton had made the same points with FM Amr, and that Morsi had said he would do so. With Amidror, I expressed condolences on the three Israelis killed earlier today by a rocket strike on Kiryat Malachi. I told both of them that we understood what Israel had told us about the various stages of their operation. To Amidror, I said I also understood that the deaths in Kiryat Malachi would produce pressure on the GOI for a response.

I also said that, as we work with the Egyptians to get them to pressure Hamas to deescalate, it will be important for Israel to allow a pause between the phases of their operation in order to give an opportunity for the Egyptian de-escalation efforts to work. As the Israeli position is 1) that it hopes not to have to proceed to the additional stages of the operation, but is prepared to do so if Hamas does not stop the rocket fire, and 2) it is not seeking a ceasefire but is prepared to listen if Hamas seeks one, there should be sufficient time built into Israel's timetable to give an opportunity for the Egyptian deescalation efforts to work.

Amidror said that as of this morning, they had seen no indication of an Egyptian effort to get Hamas to deescalate. [redacted] a full night had passed, and there were indications that the Egyptians were having trouble reaching their key Hamas contacts in Gaza, so if Egypt is making such an effort, it will probably take a bit longer to see it and for it to bear any fruit.

I should be speaking with both of them later today. If Embassy Cairo or others have any indications of the Egyptian effort to approach Hamas on deescalating, it would be very helpful to receive them.

Just spoke with Ambassador Yasser Othman, the Egyptian rep in Ramallah. He said that yesterday evening, the Egyptians "got a message from Israeli NSA Amidror, who said that if Hamas is ready to establish a new calm, Israel is ready to discuss the matter." He noted that Egypt (didn't specify, but presumably EGIS) had spoken with someone in Hamas' Gaza political leadership this morning, who stated that Hamas "does not want to blow up the whole situation ... there need to be red lines beyond which no one progresses, so we are able to ultimately contain the situation and return back to the position from which we started." Othman reiterated that the Egyptians are having great difficulty in reaching contacts from Hamas' military wing, "as they've all gone underground, and are not picking up their phones." He also noted that "there is a sentiment of profound fury within Hamas over al-Ja'bari's killing, it will be very hard to convince them to return to calm this time."

Othman said that Cairo is nonetheless actively trying to calm the situation, urging Hamas leadership to get things under control, as "it is not in Egypt's interest for the situation to deteriorate, as the more it does, the harder it will be for our leadership to contain the mood in Egypt." He underscored that "Egypt is doing its part to try to restrain Hamas, and the U.S. needs to do its part to restrain Israel."

Othman said the Egyptians decided yesterday evening to open Rafah 24 hours a day for passenger traffic.

I called the Egyptian Ambassador in Tel Aviv to check on rumors that he has been told by his government to go home. He denied that he had received any communication about his status from Cairo. It's just rumors, he told me.

He said that yesterday he had conveyed a message from directly from Ismail Haniyeh to the GOI, saying that Hamas wants to end the current round and was ready to stop firing if Israel stopped. The message also said Hamas was ready to exert control over the other organizations firing rockets.

Now, he said, it appears Israel has chosen to start something new. He said he is seeking information on how much more can be expected. I said I did not think the GOI had made any final decisions yet about how this would proceed.

Comment: The "offer" from Haniyeh is what Amidror said specifically Israel could no longer accept – every other month 150 or so rockets, followed by an Egyptian-conveyed request for a ceasefire.
