First, of all, do a background check on who she is. Reminds me of some of the town hall questioners I've had. Also, this is a typical DC bureaucratic rant. But, Raj needs our help and support so what can we do to help him understand that this comes w the territory.

Scroll down and read this woman's email to Raj.

I want to be helpful and creative in thinking through a response.

While this email is somewhat amazing in that someone actually sent this to me, I really believe our overall narrative lacks credibility and do believe the qddr will need be a key document in terms of trying to win over the building.

I don't place too much stock in this one email but I do believe I need your help and commitment to my leadership and the credibility of my overall narrative to be successful on behalf of the secretary.

Usaid and development should be a major part of her legacy and I feel I can deliver that but I need your help on the initiatives in particular because so much of my personal credibility rests on those.

Thanks for your help and support. Jeanne and I had a very long but helpful talk today.

For everyone one of these totally crazy emails/people there are 100 moderate people that we need to win over - and they are watching with skepticism right now.

In the meantime I am going to use this email as a teaching moment but I am not sure how - stay tuned...

Dear Mr. Shah,

I witnessed once again the total lack of understanding that you have of USAID and development given the disastrous situation we now find ourselves in today. We spoke with several colleagues and the following sums up the basic feelings of most of us in USAID after your talk.

USAID is nothing more than a slush fund for the State Department to as they please. No one can take you seriously and I hope you spend a minute to read before you delete this email as we do care about USAID and U.S. foreign assistance. We worked for USAID before you came and we will work for USAID after you depart. Please understand;

An agency that does not control its budget is not an agency.

An Administrator that does not report to the president is but an office director in the Department of State, not an Administrator.

You are too young and inexperienced to be of any service as a development professional as you have no experience and neither do the people who run USAID from the Department.

You asked USAID employees for their opinion, we responded to this request and you ignored the major questions posed.

You have evidently ignored the requests from two previous administrators in your last town hall. Their basic guidance was---control of the USAID budget or no control and no USAID. McPherson was right on (and probably the last legitimate Administrator in USAID) after the last three or four sold USAID down the tubes for political expediency. You ignored them and the questions posed to you by your employees. Seems like you only care about what Jack Lew or his replacement will offer, this is evident.

USAID is supposed to do basic development....we are overcharged and not served by the Department and we are bullied overseas by the Department State and by your meaningless exhortations, so poorly done in the last two months only make you look like the puppet you are.

Do us a favor and quit with at least some dignity, that way you will not be but a person serving tea at the Departments tea and crumpet's events as you have no real standing in the Department or in the Agency you allegedly lead. To lead means leadership and you are nothing more than a patsie for Drew Luten, Hillary Clinton and others in the Department.

Sincerely,

B6
