

RELEASE IN PART
B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Wednesday, August 29, 2012 8:09 PM
To: 'preines [redacted]'
Subject: Fw: quick follow-up to "twiplomacy" piece I sent you

What do you think of this idea for the last hurrah?

From: Anne-Marie Slaughter [mailto:[redacted]]
Sent: Monday, August 06, 2012 03:52 PM
To: H
Cc: 'AbedinH@state.gov' <AbedinH@state.gov>
Subject: Re: quick follow-up to "twiplomacy" piece I sent you

Agreed! I'm out at the Aspen Strategy Group and Nick Kristof suggested to me that if you were to have your own Twitter account (the way Carl Bildt does, where HE tweets rather than having an official account), it would have a huge impact on govt-to-society diplomacy for the rest of your term. Imagine the sense of people around the world that you really are speaking directly to them. It's no harder than sending a short email. W'd be easy to set up.

Best,
 AM

From: H [mailto:HDR22@clintonemail.com]
Sent: Monday, August 06, 2012 03:10 PM
To: Anne-Marie Slaughter
Subject: Re: quick follow-up to "twiplomacy" piece I sent you

What a funny term for such an important development in diplomacy, but probably better than "twitplomacy"!

Sent from my iPad

On Aug 4, 2012, at 1:04 PM, "Anne-Marie Slaughter" [redacted] wrote:

I tweeted it out and it was immediately picked up by Ambassador Rao, who sent it out with the following comment:

'article on "twiplomacy" as new way to look at our diplomatic agendas and engage with less traditional players.'

Might make sense for you to have a round-table w/ DC ambassadors on how to do govt-to-society diplomacy. Very interesting that India would pick up on this.

Best,
 AM

Anne-Marie Slaughter
 Bert G. Kerstetter '66 University Professor of Politics and International Affairs
 Princeton University
 440 Robertson Hall
 Princeton, NJ 08544

Assistant: Terry Murphy [redacted]
 Website: www.princeton.edu/~slaughtr