

RELEASE IN PART B6

From: H <hrod17@clintonemail.com>
Sent: Thursday, January 10, 2013 4:58 AM
To: 'Russorv@state.gov'
Subject: Fw: "Farewell to Secretary Clinton - Public Servant and Friend"

Pls respond.

From: Lanny Davis [redacted]
Sent: Friday, December 21, 2012 03:53 PM Eastern Standard Time
To: H
Subject: "Farewell to Secretary Clinton - Public Servant and Friend"

B6

Purple Nation

December 21, 2012

"Farewell to Secretary Clinton - Public Servant and Friend"

By Lanny J. Davis

<http://thehill.com/opinion/columnists/lanny-davis/273883-farewell-to-secretary-clinton-public-servant-and-friend>

<http://www.newsmax.com/LannyDavis/Secretary-Clinton-farewell-legacy/2012/12/20/id/468537>

<http://dailycaller.com/2012/12/20/farewell-to-secretary-clinton-a-public-servant-and-friend/>

The fact that she may be the most popular secretary of State in U.S. history is no surprise. All the qualities that made her so successful are familiar to those of us who have known her for a long time: always working hard, sensitive to others, smart, sees the big picture, great people skills.

Memories ...

September 1969. I first met Hillary Rodham when I was a third-year student at Yale Law School, registering for classes, and she was behind me in line. I recognized her, since I had recently seen her photo in a national magazine story about her valedictorian speech at Wellesley College about the legacy of the 1960s. Within five minutes she had asked me where the nearest legal clinic for the poor was in New Haven. Five minutes later I had made up my mind. One day she would be the first female president of the United States, or at the least United States senator. Almost everyone who knew her back then had the same first reaction.

Fast-forward to October 1997: My mom, frail from growing indications of heart failure, visited me at the White House so I could introduce her to her hero, Hillary. I had her repeat after me as we walked to the residence: "Hello, Mrs. Clinton; nice to meet you, Mrs. Clinton; goodbye, Mrs. Clinton" — nothing more. When the first lady walked into the room wearing a bright yellow pantsuit, she said, "Hello, Mrs. Clinton." But then she said, "Didn't you wear that suit on Larry King's show last week?" I gasped. Mom put her hand over her mouth and looked at me, anxiously, knowing she had gone off-script.

Hillary burst out laughing — that wonderful Hillary belly-laugh that has made all her friends laugh with her through the years without actually knowing what they were laughing at. “Yes, Fran, I did. You are very observant!” Mom joined her in laughter, visibly relieved.

January 2003: Newly elected South Carolina Republican Sen. Lindsey Graham, formerly the key Republican floor manager on impeachment, whom I had come to know during our many TV debates on the impeachment issue, called me to ask me whether he should approach Sen. Clinton to try to work together. Of course, I said.

Months later, I was not surprised that Graham and Clinton had worked together on the Senate Armed Services Committee to sponsor expanded healthcare benefits for National Guard and Reserve members. Nor was I surprised when the late Sen. Robert Byrd (D) of West Virginia praised her as a “workhorse, not a show-horse.”

January 2009-2012: As secretary of State, she traveled to 112 countries and transformed the way America conducts diplomacy and development — with historic focus on linking women’s rights around the world to U.S. national-security interests. She took full responsibility for the failures in the State Department that led to the tragic death of the U.S. ambassador to Libya and three other Americans. The Accountability Review Board on Tuesday night completed its investigation, found systematic management failures at the department, and made 29 recommendations to improve embassy security. Secretary Clinton accepted them all. In my view, that terrible tragedy does not mar her outstanding performance as secretary.

When Hillary Rodham Clinton leaves office sometime in the near future, it will be time for her to rest. Take time to herself — no scheduler to tell her what to do. She will have time to think; to enjoy, love and support her husband and family, as she always has done as her first priority in her life; for a while, I hope, to do nothing but relax.

But that won’t last. I don’t know whether she will ever run for public office again. But I do know one thing. She will resume an active life doing the public good, doing public service, affecting the world around her, encouraging others, somehow, somewhere, to teach, to help the less fortunate.

For that is who she is. And that is who she always will be.

#

Davis, the principal in the Washington law firm of Lanny J. Davis & Associates, which specializes in legal crisis management, served as President Clinton’s special counsel (1996-98) and as a member of President George W. Bush’s Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board (2006-07). He currently serves as special counsel to Dilworth Paxson and is a partner with former Republican National Committee Chairman Michael Steele in Purple Nation Solutions, a public affairs-strategic communications company. He is the author of the forthcoming book Crisis Tales – Five Rules for Handling Scandal in Business, Politics and Life, to be published by Simon & Schuster. He can be followed on Twitter @LannyDavis.

This message was sent to hdr22@clintonemail.com from:

Lanny J. Davis & Associates LLC | 655 Fifteenth Street, NW Suite 810 | Washington, DC 20005

Manage Your Subscription

Email
Marketing
by 