That's what I heard--not bad for her first speech!

She was terrific! Talked about studying to be a journalist and wanting to be a reporter like Christiane Amanpour. When she got her White House job, she hoped it would be in Press office a la Christiane, but instead was assigned to Melanne in policy.

Her mom's best advice was "if Plan A doesn't work, go with Plan B". She did and embraced the Melanne job and has worked in incredible positions with you for 16 years.
