Subject: Women's Rights and Reintegration

Cheryl,

You asked about the relevant sections of the Afghan Constitution vis-à-vis women's rights, and if these elements would provide an adequate safeguard for protecting women's rights if ex-Taliban commit to respect for the Constitution. It's not a clear answer; yes the Constitution provides for equal rights for men and women - but Article 3 is the loophole through which more conservative religious elements in the judiciary and the Parliament have been able to argue for less than equal treatment for women. See the email from my colleague, Rina Amiri, below detailing the specific sections.
