Rebel forces closing in on Moammar Gadhafi's regime have arrested two of his sons, including Saadi Gadhafi, a businessman who recently invested in numerous Hollywood movies, according to numerous reports from Libya.

Since the insurgency broke out earlier this year, Saadi – a former soccer player– returned to Libya to serve as commander of special forces in his father's regime.

Libya's National Transitional Council, the rebels' governing body, said on Sunday they had arrested Saif al-Islam and Saadi Gadhafi. A third, Muhammad, was reported to have handed himself in.

TheWrap reported in 2010 about the unusual alliance between producer Matty Beckerman and Gadhafi (pictured above), and how they came to become business partners in Natural Selection, a movie company with plans to make five movies over the next 20 years.

Gadhafi's invested $100 million in the company which had by last year invested in a $12 million-budget movie, "The Experiment," and fully financed the $3 million "Isolation," a thriller directed by Steven Kay ("The Shield").

The company has been paralyzed since the insurgency broke out earlier this year.

Reports were widespread on Sunday that Moammar Gadhafi had fled the country.

It was not immediately clear what would happen to the $100 million that Saadi Gadhafi had invested in Natural Selection.

CNN reported that the International Criminal Court will hold talks Monday with Libyan rebels on transferring Saif al-Islam Gadhafi to its custody. He is wanted on a war crimes charge for allegedly having ordered attacks on unarmed anti-regime protesters.

Saif al-Islam Gaddafi once had a very close relationship with the West and was considered by many to represent a more democratic future for Libya. But since the uprising began he has become closely allied to his father.

Saadi had a career as a professional soccer player, and headed Libya's soccer federation. According to an investigative report on HBO's Real Sports, Saadi used his family's wealth and power to buy his way onto some of the world's best soccer teams.

He's been known to have been pursuing a partnership in Hollywood for the past two years or so and his main occupation is working to build a free-trade zone in Libya.

But since the insurgency, reports emerged that the movie deals have come to a halt.

Beckerman has not returned multiple calls and emails from TheWrap since the revolt seeking clarification of the company's status.
