Subject: France, Britain to meet Libyan opposition in Paris (AP)

PARIS (AP) - The leaders of France and Britain have invited Libyan rebels to attend a conference in Paris next week to discuss how the international community can support Libya's new government.

The conference will be held Sept. 1.

A statement from Prime Minister David Cameron's office said the meeting would be an opportunity to set out how "the international community can help (the rebels) on the path to establishing a free, democratic and inclusive Libya. "
